SCHOOL BOARDS BUSY FOR TEACHERS

112 Rural Districts and 8 Towns in Need of a Total of 169
Teachers.

(From Cassville Republican)
A matter of importance just at this time of the year is that of making preparation for the schools of the county. The wide-awake school boards are very busy looking for teachers and making the necessary arrangements for the coming school year.

Eight towns in the county employ 52 teachers, five rural districts employ two teachers and one hundred and twelve districts one teacher each, making a total teaching force of 169. Unless the law is held up through the referendum, this is the last year the schools will be without the advantages of the County Unit system in rural education.

To date the Republican has learned of the employment of the following teachers over the county:

The entire faculty of the Cassville school has been re-employed at increases of salaries for each teacher. Whether all will accept it is not known. Rural teachers: Beatrice Boyce at Archibald; Spencer Smith, Eden; Vada Zinn, Lee; George Thomas, Lone Elm; Harvey Utter, Sparks; P. A. Freeze and Eula Hankins, Gunter; Grover Loftin and sister, at Arnhart; Bruce Lowe and Lola Yarnall at Butterfield; Elsie Robbins, Central; Mrs. Prudie Carter, Swindle; Rubie Lauderdale, Harrell; Lora Bacon, Union Valley; L. R. Packwood, Oklahoma; Leona Brock and Violet Lasley, Doss; J. L. Hankins, Bouse; W. R. Bryant, Stony Point; Oscar Prier, Shelby Grove; Clarice Frost, Quaker; Ralph Baker, Black; Mrs. Cecia Bennett, Forest Grove; Farmer Ennis, Mineral; Myrtle Baker, Gaddis; A. E. Woods, Mt. Home; J. E. Curry, Viola; Chas. Riddle, Pasley; J. T. Hodge, Vanzandt; Rice Eggleston, Cermus Grove; Ray Bryant, Potts; Joe Henry, Rock Springs; Coleman Pippin, Sunny Side; B. P. "NAAMAN'S EXPERIENCE" SUBJECT AT CHRISTIAN CHURCH

A great service at the Christian church last night. Two confessions of Faith. Man and Wife. People are coming that had not been there before drawn by the Gospel message of Truth. Evangelists Wallace and Wilson were more than pleased with the large audience last night and the interest shown.

Prof. Wilson sang by request for the fourth time "I'm a Little Old Fashioned I Know." The quartet of little girls singing the "Swing Song" was well appreciated. The special song by Mr. Wilson: "Christ Found Me" was very impressive.

Tonight the special songs are: A duet by Mr. Ed Shepherd and Mr. Wilson "Some day 'Twill all be over" and a solo by Mr. Wilson "Judgment Morning." Also a duet with Miss Jewel Estes "Jesus Leads."

The sermon tonight will be about Naaman's Experience.

TEXAS TOWN DESTROYED BY TORNADO

Funnel-Shaped Cloud Swooped Down on Melissa, Causing Heavy Property Damage.

McKinney, Tex., April 13.—At 2:10 o'clock this afternoon a funnel-shaped cloud swooped down on Melissa, six miles north of McKinney, and practically wiped out the little town of one thousand people, killing several children, whose names could not be obtained, due to damage to communication lines running out of the village.

The cloud travelled almost due east carrying everything in its wake, destroying a $50,000 brick school building. Practically every business house and residence for one-half mile east of the interurban is a total wreck.

Every church in Melissa was blown down.

Two freight trains on the Houston and Texas Central railroad were scattered along the track for one-half mile, according to the reports here. M. C. Hansen, W. L. Sheed and B. J. Hanson, railroad men, were injured. Sheed probably fatally.

Five children, three white and two negro, were killed, the reports reaching here said. A number of persons were bruised and cut. A dozen doctors from McKinney are aiding the Melissa physicians. Property and crop damage will amount to thousands of dollars, the reports said.

ZEPHEULO AGONIZES WITH "Toothache", Makes "Dive and Swim" and Has "Baby" Cry.

They say it "can't be done," and yet last night at the RIALTO THEATRE ZEPHEULO the hypnotist who is playing the week there made the young gentlemen who came onto the stage believe they were in terrible suffering with a terrible toothache. They literally cried and pleaded for relief; their agony was most real apparently, and their suffering pitiful. And again he told them they were on a river bank with their bathing suits on; that they should take off their coats and swim. They tore their shirts off and made the head-first "Ole Swimm'n' Hole" dive onto the hard floor of the stage—there they "swam". And one of them took an enthusiastic poise on the edge of the footlights and made his eight-foot dive out into the auditorium, right into the thick of the chairs and he began to swim, the chairs flying thick and fast. He liked the diving, so he climbed on the orchestra rail and made four more head-long dives out into the chairs, and if ZEPHEULO had not come to his rescue probably he would be "swimming" round under the seats this morning. And it took a well-filled baby's nursing bottle to soothe the hunger pangs of one of the young men who thought he was a hungry baby and another young man was his nurse. And while these subjects suffered with their toothaches, their hunger and swam around on the stage and dived out eight feet into the chairs the big audience roared. How could they help it?

ZEPHEULO will be here until Saturday night and he promises that the fun will grow bigger and better each night. Tonight he will give ten minutes to the little boys and some more time to the BIG ones. The pictures will be ELMO LINCOLN in "THE INNER VOICE" and "THE LOST CITY." "The Inner Voice" is one of the biggest pictures the RIALTO has ever shown for only one day. Prices are only 10 and 25c. A Little Business Man

One day a very small boy came to the bank with his grandmother, to open a savings account.

That grandmother was wise—she knew how to handle boys for she stood aside and let that little fellow attend to the business all alone. He had to stand on his toes to talk to the man in the cage and he got down on his knees beside a chair to write his name and address for us—he was too small to write on the table.

When we handed him his little bank book he tucked it away carefully in his inside pocket and then told his grandmother he was ready to go.

As they left the bank the lad turned to look once more at the bank—his bank—with a look of genuine pride in his face. A man who had watched the proceedings smiled and said:—"There goes a little business man," and we all agreed with him.

How about your boy?
